

Can you do this?

Ideally, data entry operators would never need to take their hands off the keyboard for any reason. Now with Falcon64 and its powerful imaging features, they don't have to. The Falcon64 imaging feature has all the powerful heads-down data entry features professionals have come to expect from Falcon data entry products with all the benefits of keying from an image.

When you reach the end of one record, the software automatically displays the next image. As you enter a field, the area from which you are keying comes into view and is highlighted. A field prompt window displays the field you are currently keying. The "on top" feature places the image window on top and toggle to the data entry screen if the system detects a keying error. You can also use this feature to fill the screen with your image, mirroring the heads-down data entry experience.

Falcon64 makes key-from-image just like paper...but better!
